JUNE

Happy Father's Day!

Dear Friends,

School's out for summer! For those of you with school aged kids at home, what do you like to do during the summer? I feel like we have a similar, but fun filled list that we create at the end of every school year of the things that we'd like to do over the summer. The list generally includes a lot of swimming, camping, golfing, fishing, and hopefully a trip or two to Water World.

If your kids are stuck for some ideas or want some puzzles to do while they eat their breakfast, here are some fun activities for them. We hope you and your family enjoy your summer!

Take care,

Katie

Communication Over Sixty Years

When Longmont Dairy began in 1965, customer communication looked a lot different. Phone calls were an option—but with only one phone in most homes, getting through was not always easy. So, we relied on handwritten notes—lots of them!

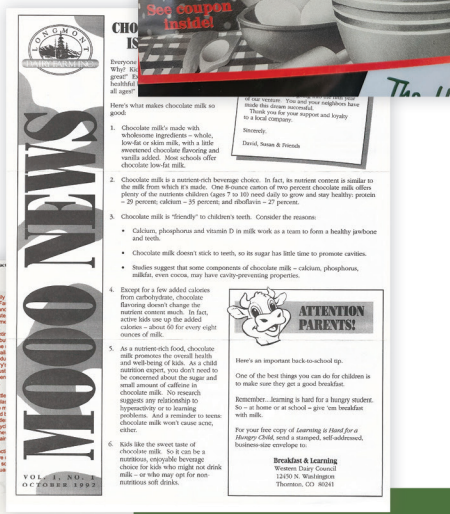

Each driver had a large "route book" for that day's deliveries. If we needed to leave a message or a bill, we tucked a note into the book's page for that home, which was then placed in the customer's milk box. Customers left their notes for us there, too—a simple but effective system.

As technology evolved, so did we. When personal computers became more common, we launched our website in the late 1990s—one of the first in our industry. At the time, we didn't know how it would grow, but it has since become the heart of our ordering system. We regularly update it with new products, weather alerts, and seasonal offerings. It's also where you can find past recipes from Mooo News!

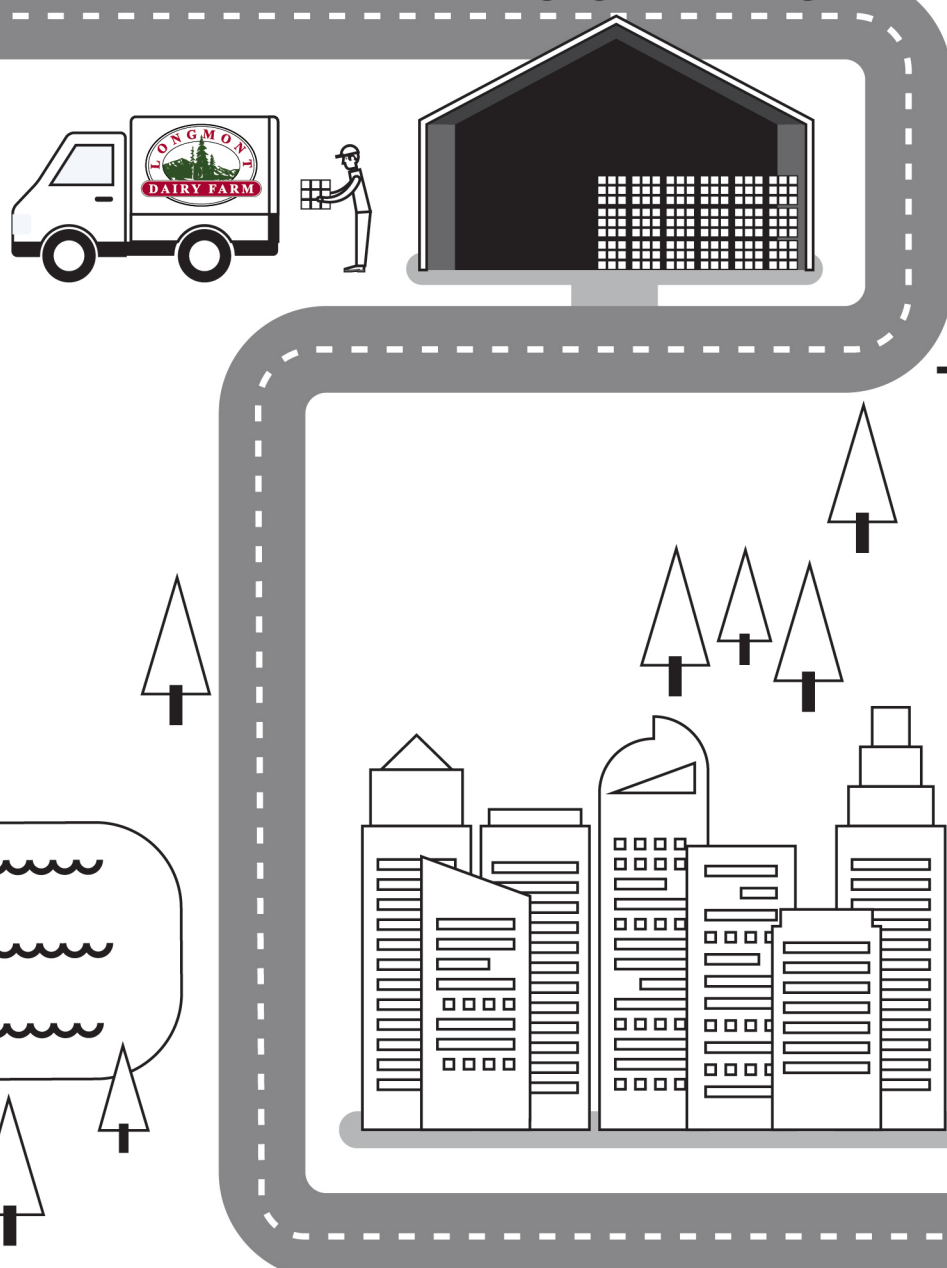

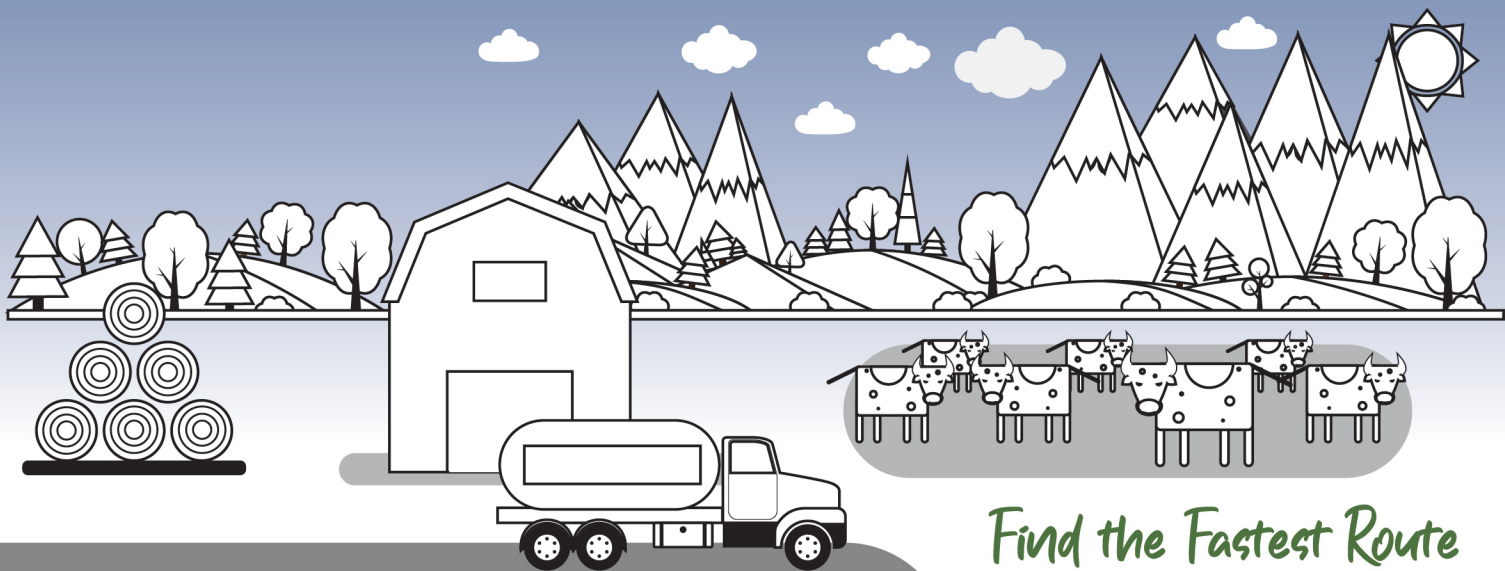

Today, our website is joined by our mobile app, which makes it easy to manage your delivery on-the-go and includes helpful reminders to update your order each week. We also stay in touch through email, texts, social media, and short videos.

Our Mooo News newsletter—now 33 years old—has come a long way from its black-and-white beginnings in 1992. Now, it's created with full-color digital printing and includes fun stories, helpful tips, and local features that we love sharing with you each month.

One thing that has never changed is our personal service. Whether you contact us online or speak with one of our friendly staff right here in Longmont, we are always happy to help!
